

CONDENSED CURRICULUM VITAE

Manneheng Violet Raphuthing

Manneheng Violet Raphuthing is a mother and dedicated education stakeholder with a strong background in health sciences and community service. She holds a master's degree in biomedical technology and is currently a PhD candidate pursuing a Doctor of Health Science. Her academic training has strengthened her skills in research, critical thinking, ethics, and governance qualities essential for effective school leadership.

She is currently working at Central University of Technology, Free state at the Faculty of Health and Environmental Science at the Centre of Applied Food Sustainability and Biotechnology.

Manneheng is passionate about the holistic development of children, both academically and morally.

She is an active member of the Anglican Church at the Cathedral of St Andrew and St Michael in Bloemfontein, where she has served faithfully as a Sunday school teacher for the past 15 years, working closely with children and families.

Outside her professional and community roles, she is a committed long-distance runner who has completed seven Comrades Marathons, demonstrating discipline, perseverance, and teamwork.

As a parent, Manneheng understands the importance of quality education, accountability, and a safe, nurturing school environment. She is committed to contributing positively to the School Governing Body and working collaboratively with parents, educators, and learners for the benefit of the school community.